RÉNOVATION DU RÉSEAU D'EAU POTABLE ET D'ASSAINISSEMENT

PLACE CHARLES DE GAULLE - LES LILAS

Découvrez ce qu'il faut savoir !

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million (1990–2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a vision for the future of health and social care for older people. This vision is based on the principle of 'active ageing', which is the process of optimising the health, participation and security of older people. The vision is to create a society in which older people are able to live independently, actively and securely, and to contribute to the well-being of the community.

The vision is based on three key principles: (1) the need to promote the health and well-being of older people; (2) the need to ensure that older people are able to participate in the life of the community; and (3) the need to ensure that older people are able to live securely. The vision is to create a society in which older people are able to live independently, actively and securely, and to contribute to the well-being of the community.
